Richer Vision

By M. Glidewell

If you are a writer -- of humor, of drama, of crime, of politics, of movies, of science, of life -- you should OWN, READ, AND STUDY this book. I sold my first joke around 1967, and have sold jokes and cartoon ideas to national and local comics, greeting card companies, and cartoonists. This book helped me see The Funny in more places.

This book helps you recognize, save, and use the material the universe gives you every hour of every day. The best writers are those who can see the universe with great precision, through their own idiosyncratic eyeballs, then relay what they saw to the reader, to the listener. This book helps you do that. JR tells you how to notice and record The Funny/The Drama/The McGuffin/The blue mold in the petri dish.

This book could be invaluable as a supplemental text in writing courses, as it shows the writer how to abandon bland vague text strings and capture specifics. A remark on page 27 captures its essential message, couched in JR's humorist's voice: "From this day forth, resolve to act like a trained noticer."

One caveat: Robertson is a humorist and I found some of the humor in this book exceeded my quota for "country and corn pone" humor. But I did not buy it for the jokes; I bought it to learn about her method of noticing and recording the universe. Every day I see and write more clearly because I read this book. Do not deny yourself this superb tool.

Great book on humor

By Kristin J. Arnold

Jeanne is not only humorous, but she shares her process on finding humor in the world around us.

She will draw you into the humor of her "flat out funny" view of the world

By StarReader

Jeanne Robertson is one of those special "right-brained" thinkers who can draw you into the humor of her "flat out funny view of the world." As she states so often, we can all choose to see the humor in situations. And, she does. She is not a comedian - telling joke after joke. She is a humorist and does just that. She helps you see the humor in real life with real people with real every day situations. It is so refreshing and will lift your spirits before you know. She shares her formula for doing that in her book "Don't Let the Funny Stuff Get Away." By reading this book a number of times already and watching her DVDs, I am fascinated by her skillful and very natural delivery. I highly recommend her work here for speakers and for teachers of all ages, big kids too, to help people laugh and perhaps in the process learn something. Great job Jeanne. Signed a "Right-Brained Thinker" (who also respects and appreciates those "Left-Brained thinkers). :)
