Journal of Roman Military Equipment Studies 12/13

By Amazon Customer

This journal is dedicated to the study of weapons, armour and fighting within the Roman World. The listed contents in the above blurb are wrong. Cataphracti equites, quos clibanarii dictitant (A E Negin); and The Eining lorica segmentata (M C Bishop) are not in this issue, but instead you have "Klivanion revisited: an evolutionary typology and catalogue of Middle Byzantine lamellar styles" (Tim Dawson) and "A critical review of the Bishop version 1.01 Newstead lorica segmentata in the wake of a prototype's creation. (L. Arik Greenberg), as well as "Reinforcing a Roman Helmet during the Dacian Wars" (David Sim) and "Pieces of Roman Military Equipment in a Roman Cellar at the Bemelerveld in Maastricht (The Netherlands)" (Bernard Van Daele).

The text is mostly written in English, with two articles in German and one in Spanish. All of the articles have excellent line drawings and B&W photographs. This is truly a needed addition to any collection about Roman military equipments.

Peter Connolly's article is eye-opening for those who have not studied the pila in various museums, and corrects some of the Hollywood notions and 19th century writings that improperly described the function and construction of this Roman missile weapon.
