Interesting & Useful for professionals

By Bonnie Neely

Taihe Dian, The Hall of supreme Harmony of the Forbidden City in Beijing edited by Laura Moro is an interesting concept for a book: perfect for archeologists and architects. The book is filled with color photos and detailed drawings of the very careful and extensive examination of this famous and beloved edifice in Beijing, China. With all the modern tools of photography and radar and computers used, this is the first such exploration of its kind and shows the structure from all angles in amazing ways, a careful and thorough record for the future, should anything happen to destroy the building. It will be fascinating for scholars to study.
