What readers are saying:

“If you liked 50 Shades of Grey you'll like this book. If you didn't like 50 Shades, you'll love it. The characters are well-drawn and believable, the women are strong and empowered, and the main character's transformation is a joy to behold. I'd love to see this one turned into a movie!”

“So good to read a book that has kink, character, and doesn't demean women, but celebrates them. A welcome departure from the genre (I'm looking at you, 50 Shades, Bared to You...)”

“Smartly written, The Lady's Will really transports you to a different world. It felt like I was there, in Wales, alongside the characters. Adele's self-discovery is like watching a flower bloom, and Victoria's charismatic and theatrical personality leaps off the page. A solid effort from this writer.”

From The Lady's Will:

“For the sixth and final stroke, I decided to really let it fly. I swung hard. The cane cut through the air and bit into his flesh . . . My head swooned. I knew right then that I could never go back to dinner dates and conversations and polite sex. I had tasted power, and I liked its heady draught.”

A super fun read

By Amy Davis

I couldn't put this fun and enjoyable book down once started. This is how 50 Shades should have been! A nice respite from my usual paranormal romances.

Really wonderful read

By Larry

This novel was a great read, a real page turner. It's a story of a young woman finding her self esteem and power through femdom BDSM, and about the men around her finding happiness in submission. It's not too sexually explicit, not completely focused on the erotic aspects, but still manages to be very hot because the characters are so well drawn. This book tugs at the heartstrings more than the privates, which was not what I was expecting, but I absolutely loved it and the characters. What a great book!
